Comprehension Questions (Q.91 to Q.95)

Read the following passage and answer the questions below:

Under copyright laws of different jurisdictions world-over, software is considered a literary work, written down, recorded or otherwise reduced to mathematical form, and entails protection. Copyright protects the expression (form) of an idea and not the idea itself. It also cannot be used to protect the procedure, process, system, method of operation, concept, principle or discovery. Copyright law is not supposed to create monopolies. Copyright subsists in original works that are capable of being reproduced from a fixed medium. It is granted for movies, musical compositions, paintings and for many other creative expressions. Article 10(1) of the Agreement on Trade Related Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS) provides copyright protection to computer programmes. The copyright is a bundle of rights, which entitles the owner of the copyright to take action against its violation. It is, thus, a negative right that enables the author to prevent any other person from dealing with the copyrighted material. Copyright subsists in a computer programme provided sufficient effort or skill has been expended to give it a new and original character. But a computer programme which only produces the multiplication tables or the alphabets, cannot lay claim to copyright protection, because the amount of skill or efforts to bring out such a work is too trivial to term it new and of original character.

Sub-Question No: 91

Q.91

How do copyright laws of different jurisdictions consider software?

1. It is considered a literary work.
2. It is considered an artistic work.
3. It is considered a non-copyrightable work.
4. It is considered a monopoly work.

Sub-Question No: 92

Q.92

Can copyright subsist in a computer programme?

1. No, since computer programmes are only readable by machines.
2. No, since all computer programmes have nothing original about them.
3. Yes, since all computer programmes are works of art.
4. Yes, if sufficient effort or skill has been expended to give it a new and original character.

Sub-Question No: 93

Q.93

Which provision of the Agreement on Trade-Related Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS) provides copyright protection to computer programs?

1. Article 1(1)
2. Article 2(10)

Q.94

Can a computer programme be granted copyright if it produces only the multiplication tables?

1. Yes, because a multiplication table is a work of art.
2. Yes, because there is creativity involved in it.
3. No, because the skill or effort to bring out such works is too trivial to term it new and of original character.
4. No, because it is just a discovery and not an invention.

Sub-Question No: 95

Q.95

Where does copyright subsist?

1. Copyright subsists in original works incapable of being reproduced.
2. Copyright subsists in non-original works capable of being reproduced.
3. Copyright subsists in original works capable of being reproduced.
4. Copyright subsists in all works irrespective of their capacity to be reproduced.

Comprehension Questions (Q.96 to Q.100)

Read the following passage and answer the questions below:

Besides providing for a functional government and consequential growth in the administrative process, the Constitution has also provided for an elaborate control mechanism so that the water may not overrun its banks. Under Articles 32 and 226, the Supreme Court and the various High Courts have been invested with powers to issue writs of certiorari, mandamus, quo warranto, prohibition and habeas corpus to check the excesses of the government and the administrative agencies. Article 300 gives a right to individuals to file a suit against the government for torts committed by its servants. Article 311 protects government servants from arbitrary actions of the government in the matters of dismissal, termination and reduction in rank. In the same manner, Article 136 confers power on the Supreme Court to grant special leave to appeal from any judgement, decree, determination, sentence or order passed or made by any court or tribunal in India. Article 227 further invests the High Courts with the power of superintendence over all courts and tribunals within their jurisdiction. All legislative actions of the administration have been expressly brought by the Constitution within the purview of Article 13 by defining "law" as including "order", "bye-law", rule" and "notification", etc. having the force of law.

Sub-Question No: 96
